Industrial adds

Site clearing started Monday on a $105,000 addition to the Industrial Enameling Division of Industrial Electric, Inc., which began operations in Bay St. Louis in February, 1962.

The expansion program, which will enlarge the present plant on Central Avenue by about 50 per cent, is scheduled to be in use by late May, according to Robert F. Guilbault, general manager.

The addition will be to the west of the present plant and contain 26,000 square feet of floor space. Work also calls for relocation of the railroad track into the plant and increasing it the entire length of the building to facilitate handling of inbound and outbound shipments.

Design and construction is being handled by E.M. Brignac, Jr., and Wallace Burns. Negotiations have been in progress several months to acquire adjoining tracts for the addition.

Expanded sales throughout the nation and in other countries of the enamel panels fabricated here have brought about the need for more plant space for production, Guilbault noted. Panels manufactured in Bay St. Louis found their way behind the Iron Curtain when Industrial Enameling supplied panels for the American Children's Hospital in Krakow, Poland, as a joint venture with Caco Steel Products of Chicago.

Another order of panels, earmarked to Sitka Airport in Alaska, was on a barge which sank during the Alaska earthquake last year but were salvaged and used as planned.

The local plant, which employs an average of 150 persons, has just completed a job for Capt. Cook Hotel, a multi-story building in Anchorage, Alaska, and recently handled multi-complex retirement settlements in Atlanta, Ga., and Weslaco, Tex. The 21-story Siteman Building in Houston, Tex., also was supplied with panels made in Bay St. Louis.

Going into production this week were panels for the new Methodist church in Gulfport.

The original plant was built under a $300,000 BAWI bond issue. It is owned by Bay St. Louis and leased to Industrial Enameling on a 25 year renewable contract. Its annual payroll runs in excess of half a million dollars and is the city's first major industry. President of the company is E.M. Brignac of South Beach.

Pearlington school gets Aug. 1 target

elementary school should commence about Aug. 1, and be in operation by Jan. 15, 1966, according to Hancock County school board attorney Walter J. Phillips.

In programming the forthcoming bond issue and subsequent disbursement of funds, Phillips told trustees Monday the issue should receive the school board's endorsement in March, meet the approval of the board of supervisors in April, and go before the electorate on May 1. Immediate advertising for bids should result in Aug. 1 sod cutting ceremonies.

"Should all go well and no delays are experienced with weather or bids, it is not impossible that July 15 will see building commenced," Phillips said.

Gulfview and Pearlington delegations present heard the attorney outline the planned contents of the new six to eight classroom Pearlington plant and the additions proposed for Lakeshore and Hancock North Central High School.

He explained that an estimated $40,000 to be received by the board as assessment payments would be added to the $350,000 bond issue for construction purposes. NASA funds are to be put into a bond sinking fund and used to reduce the mill rate required for bond retirement.

Proposed schedules of construction, should the bond issue be approved by the electorate, were required by Mississippi are soon to pass judgment on a request submitted by the board for an extension to the effective date on Logtown school's notice to vacate. If granted this will be the second such extension granted the NASA buffer zone educational plant. The first, running until the end of this school year, postponed a previous deadline of Nov. 1. The new extension was requested until mid-January 1966.

The bond issue which previously failed to pass by only 56 votes, an action blamed on insufficient information being in the hands of the electorate, is now under study by St. Louis, Mo., bond attorneys.

Thanked publicly by Bear 1 supervisor H.C. Dean, who was on record before trustees as being in favor of the new issue, board members were congratulated with the way proposed school building costs were being handled.

On this matter attorney Phillips said, "We deemed it essential to obtain all necessary approvals before completing the bond issue."

Another item slated for early discussion was the case (Cont. on Page 6.)

Teahouse gets play award at theater meet

Teahouse of the August Moon, directed by Mrs. Frank Kiefer, was chosen as the best play of the 1964 season at the annual meeting of the Bay St. Louis Little Theater last Thursday night at the Boardman Avenue playhouse. More than 50 members attended.

Mrs. Kenneth Thompson of Waveland was elected secretary to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Harold Keefe who has moved to the Mid-west.

A raise in dues from $5 to $6 a year was approved and plans furthered to air conditioning and insulating the theater. As a training program assistants are to be named to each director and committee chairman.

Selection of the first play of the year is pending. It is to be presented in late March and directed by Paul White, assisted by Lloyd Cuevas.

Member goal was set at 300 this year. Checks should be mailed to Paul White, membership chairman, Felicity Street.

The legislation provides that each supervisory district may appoint one member for a term concurrent with that of the supervisor and each municipality shall appoint a member for a like term, the latter subject to confirmation by the governing body of the municipality.

Waveland's appointment last summer of Joseph V. Colson as supervisor of the late James M. Robert was promptly ratified.

Tennessee Gas revised its request to the board for easements over county roads for its one paralleling that of the one through Hancock County and agreed to be responsible for any damage to county property to its contractors or agents. The easement was granted with the provision that each supervisor affect be notified when heavy equipment is to be moved in his boat.

The spokesman for Tennessee Gas observed that additional taxes accruing to the county from the extension should take care of any other incidentals.

Tennessee Gas is currently the county's largest single taxpayer.

Habard recalls that in 1958 when the first line was laid, the company paid Bear 1 about $7,200 in damages to roads and bridges.

At the suggestion of Alderman Dominick Souler the Town Council of Waveland put off until assessment time this summer a request from Gulfside Assembly that almost 500 lots in a subdivision be removed from Waveland's tax rolls because of the religious nature of the assembly, a Methodist group.

Discussion of the matter brought the suggestion from Alderman John Long, Jr., that Waveland have a rule that the exempt property of a church should be removed from the tax rolls through a vote of the council.

on the ground it would discriminate against Gulfside Assembly, which he said owned over 50 acres, much more than any other church group in the area.

Long's view that some limit must be set, however, brought some support from Souler and Town Attorney Dan M. Russell, Jr.

Earlier Mrs. George Seitz pleaded with council to provide lighting and bleachers for football and baseball at Waveland's Elmore Memorial park. She asked for a definite answer as to when the council would play.

CD rescues man aground on Pearl

Local civil defense volunteers, directed by Bert Stiefel, worked through the night Monday in a successful rescue of 26-year-old Cary H. Bufkin of Pearl, Christian.

Located about 12:25 a.m. Tuesday on the Louisiana side of Pearl River in his disabled boat, which had drifted onto a sunken barge, Bufkin was suffering from exposure and, in his words, "... almost blue with cold."

"I was going to take a chance on swimming across," said Bufkin the following day, "but with that 30-mile an hour wind against me I didn't think I'd make it."

The episode began about 4 p.m., when Bufkin, a Logtown camp owner with a fast approaching notice to vacate date decided to take a boating trip. Worried over his non-return by 10 p.m., his wife who drove out from Pearlington, contacted Horace G. (Red) Davis, Jr., of MTO security patrol. Davis radioed Hancock County sheriff's office who, in turn, alerted civil defense.

About this time Bufkin had used up all the ammunition in both guns he had taken with him and exhausted his supply of one white and two red flares. "The guns made a lot of noise and the flares gave off lots of light but, of course, when the confusion of all the buffer zone people there was just nobody to see or hear my distress signals," explained Bufkin.

Taxes and roads

Mr. John D. Smith, highway Commissioner for the southern district of Mississippi, pointed out some interesting facts and figures when he talked last week to the Bay St. Louis Rotary Club.

Although Mississippi's 7-cent per gallon tax is above the average of the Southern states, the highway department actually has less than 2 cents of the 7 cents to spend.

Two and one half cents goes to the counties; approximately 1 1/2 cents is dedicated to match federal funds; slightly more than 1 cent is pledged in the redemption of bonds and interest. Of the less than 2 cents remaining, municipalities receive $1,000,000; the Motor Vehicle Department gets $1,200,000 and the Coast counties get $800,000.

Based on last year's figures, each 1 cent per gallon amounts to $7,818,966. A casual check of these figures shows that our State Highway Commission has less than $13,000,000 to spend as they please. This, of course, does not include funds they spend in coordination with the federal government. For instance, the current budget for interstate highways provides $33,926,550 from federal funds with 1/9 of that amount to be put up by the States.

Commissioner Smith advanced the idea that our gasoline tax should be increased to 8 cents per gallon in order to provide the highway department with minimal funds. In our opinion, this is the wrong approach.

We think the people of Hancock County or Lamar County or whatever county, should know what they are paying for. Consequently, we don't believe the counties should get that 2 1/2 cents share from the State gasoline tax. It is our theory that the State gasoline tax should be cut to 6 cents per gallon with the counties authorized to levy up to 3 cents per gallon in taxes. In this way the people will know whom to blame when they buy gasoline and we believe will be much more interested in how the supervisors spend their gasoline tax dollars.

We realize that our proposal will find almost unanimous opposition from the various boards of supervisors but believe, it is the proper approach. However, whether our view or Commissioner Smith's view is correct, the fact remains that the Mississippi Highway Department needs substantially more money.

A guest editorial

Talking to Hancock North Central's basketball coach, Roland Ladner, the other day, we picked up a piece of information that surprised us. Coach Ladner estimated that Hawk supporters attended the Gulf Coast Conference tournament at St. Martin in greater numbers than would ordinarily appear at even a major home game. True, this was a big affair, and HNC won the series (the morale boost of so many home folk present was undoubtedly a factor). But, the financial support for each school's athletic program comes from the gate receipts of games played at home, and it seems a shame that parents and students have not been turning up for their school's home games.

Billy Sills of Bay High's coaching staff, has observed the same phenomenon, as has Brother Neri, athletic director at St. Stanislaus. All three of Hancock's high schools have turned out good teams this year, and we'd rather watch a live game than fall half asleep in front of television anytime, but apparently too many people don't feel the same way. It's depriving your school, and perhaps your own son or daughter, of the needed improvements in our physical education and recreation programs.

-H.D. EVANS

Gallant warrior

Sir Winston Churchill is no longer among the living. Since he lived a full score of years beyond the biblical four score and ten, few tears can be shed on that point.

When his mortal remains were put to rest last Saturday, his contribution to our world was not laid with them. The present Prime Minister, Mr. Harold Wilson, Sir Winston's Laborite opponent, understated the case when he said "it will be for those war years that his name will be remembered as long as history is written and history is read. The history of our time could be written around the triumphs and frustrations of Winston Churchill."

In the scope of our memory, Sir Winston, Historian, Scholar and Statesman, had but one possible contender for a Man of the Century award but an assassin's bullet snuffed out the life of our President, John F. Kennedy, before he had a chance to compete.

We are both proud and humble that "Winnie" was an honorary citizen of the United States of America.

A Conservative View

By James J. Kilpatrick

Ex malo bonum, and all that sort of thing, Mr. Johnson's miserable cough that Saturday morning may have been worth all the discomfort it caused the President, and all the worry it roused in everyone else, if it prompts the Congress to take early action on the "disability amendment." This needed revision of the Constitution has been lost in procrastination for more than a hundred years, since Tyler took over on Harrison's death. The light that lit up Berkeleys ten days ago should be a signal that the time for action has come.

The constitutional difficulty is by now well known. Under Article II, whenever a President is unable to discharge the powers and duties of said office, "the same" shall devolve on the Vice-President. The first question is whether the antecedent of "the same" is "the powers and duties" or "the said office." Most scholars agree that it is the office itself that devolves. The second question goes to the determination of a President's "inability." Who is to say when a President is unable to discharge his powers and duties if the President himself is unable or unwilling to do so? The third question arises from the provision that authorizes Congress to provide for someone to act as President "until the disability be removed." Who is to say when a Chief Executive is mentally and physically ready to resume his burdens?

During the 88th Congress, the Bayh Amendment, sponsored chiefly by the Senator from Indiana, won approval in the Senate. The time ran out before the House could concur. On Jan. 6, Mr. Bayh died and his colleagues—more than the required two-thirds of the Senate—once again introduced the proposal. Simultaneously, seven identical resolutions were offered in the House, among them H.R. 1 by New York's Emanuel Celler, chairman of House Judiciary.

The Bayh-Celler plan, endorsed by the American Bar Assn., is divided into two parts. The first deals with a vacancy in the office of Vice-President. Whenever said occurs, the President is to nominate a Vice-President "who shall take office upon confirmation by a majority vote of both Houses of Congress."

The second part deals with disability. A President who is mentally and physically unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office shall be discharged by the Vice-President as acting President. If a President does not so declare (he might be in a coma; he might have gone insane), the Vice-President may take over the powers and duties with the concurrence of "a majority of the heads of the executive departments or such other body as Congress may by law provide." Finally, a President could resume his office by certifying that no disability exists, unless the Vice-President and a majority of the Cabinet should transmit within two days to the Congress a written declaration that the President was in their view still disabled. Congress would decide the issue immediately. A two-thirds vote of both houses would be required to continue the Vice-President in office as acting President. Otherwise, the President would take back the reins.

A score of other constitutional amendments also have been proposed in this field. One plan would create an eight-member Presidential Disability Commission, headed by the Chief Justice. Another would create a Commission on Prevention of Loss of Executive Power, composed of the House and Senate Judiciary Committees. Other proposals would simply vest in the Congress an unprecedented power to deal with the problem by statute.

The Bayh-Celler approach bears such impressive sponsorship that its early approval could be predicted, but for one thing: A great many other constitutional amendments dealing with the presidency are pending. Mr. Johnson himself has asked for an amendment to prevent presidential elections from occurring after his death. He has also asked for a constitutional amendment to prevent a President from being re-elected after having served two terms. The Bayh-Celler amendment is a small part of a larger package.

Such a large number of amendments is now pending, which is not in the best of the Constitution. The plan has been proposed that the Supreme Court should have the power to decide which amendments are to be considered. The Supreme Court should have the power to decide which amendments are to be considered.

Letters to The Editor

Editor, Sea Coast Echo:

This is a plea to the Superintendent of education of Hancock County, individuals in charge of the parochial schools and particularly the parents, whose children went for school buses along the Old Spanish Trail. I use this term going to work each morning and see groups of ten or more children using this busy road as a play ground, while waiting for the bus. A traffic accident is in the making. There is no reason why these children cannot remain on the little used side roads until their bus arrives.

A co-worker tells me that this same practice is occurring on State Rd. 603 (Shoreline Park) where the speed limit is 65 mph.

Respectfully,
EVERETTE MORGAN
Bay St. Louis.

editor, Sea Coast Echo:

May we have an 8x10 glossy print of a photograph which ran in your newspaper on January 7, 1965, captioned: AN EDITORIAL - BAY ST. LOUIS BEAUTIES, GARDEN CLUB VARIETY. The photograph showed "SOUTH BEACH BLVD." used for this montage.

As the national non-profit organization for the prevention of litter, we serve as a clearing house of information on the litter problem throughout the country. This picture would be a great asset to our photo file.

May we also have permission to reproduce the picture in our educational materials?

Your newspaper is making an important contribution in public service by carrying material on the KAB program—and it is greatly appreciated.

Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON - Disclosure that the law firm of Robert Celler, Brooklyn Democrat and long-time chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, split a fee with Bobby Baker could open up an investigation of one of the worst legal rackets in Capitol Hill—Congressional law firms.

Various Congressmen, especially in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, have been practicing law on the side, sometimes getting their clients' legislation mixed up with the national interest.

The practice is bipartisan and ranges from the Celler law firm to that of William Miller, recently Republican candidate for Vice President. Another Congressman who practices law is Abraham Mulder, Democrat of Brooklyn.

Because the law firm racket cuts both ways, it's doubtful whether any real investigation will take place. However, Republicans have been hammering so hard on the Bobby Baker probe that they may have opened the door. If there is an investigation of the Celler law firm, you can be sure there will also be one of the Miller law firm in Lockport, N.Y.

Churchill's son-in-law

John N. Wheeler, the elder statesman-journalist who is head of the North American Newspaper Alliance used to negotiate with Winston Churchill for his writings, tells this story on the late British statesman.

Churchill's daughter Sarah was once married to a British actor, Vic Oliver, whom Churchill didn't like. His dislike was based partly on the fact that Vic Oliver called him "Papa."

After the war was over, Oliver once asked Churchill: "Papa, who was the greatest leader of the war?"

"Mussolini," grumbled Churchill. "He had the courage to shoot his son-in-law."

The President's health

In retrospect, those closest to the President regret the doctor's decision to take him to the hospital at 2:30 a.m. It scared the public unduly, aroused suspicions that the old heart ailment had returned.

However, my investigation leads to the conclusion that this was not the case, that the President did have a fever, was exhausted, and did need to get away from the telephone. But he could have rested just as well at the White House without alarming the public.

Cause of the President's illness was partly personal vanity. He refused to wear an overcoat during the swearing-in ceremony. He did wear thermal underwear; but he had to stand for more than 15 minutes before the swearing-in ceremony began, then another 30 minutes during the ceremony.

On top of this, Inaugural Week was exhausting. Earlier he had been working late on various messages, had had no opportunity to unwind.

LBJ is probably the most intense President to occupy the White House since the days of Theodore Roosevelt. His hours in the executive offices sometimes go right up to 10 p.m. before he breaks for dinner. After dinner he invariably works in his bedroom, sometimes reading reports until 2 or 3 a.m. He is usually up at 7, though actually doesn't get out of bed until around 9. He reads in bed.

He takes a full hour's nap in the afternoon, undressing and putting on pajamas.

Eisenhower after his heart attack spent more time out of the White House than in it. Kennedy took frequent weekends in Palm Beach, Hyannisport, or in Virginia. Johnson doesn't like Camp David, finds it too isolated, too lonesome. He prefers the White House for weekends if he can't go back to Texas. He's sensitive, however, regarding the cost of flying to Texas—about $10,000 a round-trip.

Mrs. Johnson has talked about renting the Virginia estate of Mrs. Philip Graham, publisher of the Washington Post, as an alternative weekend retreat. But the President still likes the White House.

Adam Powell's Palace

After showing UP! photographer Ed Alley around his palatial office suite in the new Rayburn Building, Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, D-N.Y., inquired:

"What do you think of it?"

"There's only one thing wrong," suggested Alley. "You don't have a space in here for your Jaguar."

Sentiment hardens

Under the new Civil Rights Act, the Health, Education, and Welfare Department has been asking Southern school districts whether they are complying with the Supreme Court ruling on integration. The reply... have been significant.

A majority of Southern school districts have signed pledges to integrate, including more than 60 per cent in Georgia. Many rural areas in Georgia, South Carolina, and Alabama have sent the forms back—unsigned. Chief negative reaction has come from Mississippi, where sentiment has hardened against both integration and the federal government.

There is considerable sentiment in Mississippi for closing all Negro schools and using state tax money to educate white children only. Some time ago the State Legislature repealed the Mississippi Public School Law, so that compulsory public school education does not exist in Mississippi.

Civil Rights loophole

Finally, Mississippians have found a significant loophole in the Civil Rights Act which is supposed to cut off federal funds to Mississippi when schools fail to integrate.

The loophole is in section 6 of the Civil Rights Act, which states that federal funds shall not be cut off when any school is in litigation over integration.

Mississippians have now conceived the bright idea of having Negro students sue their schools, thus throwing them into litigation and thus preventing the cut-off of school funds.

"You don't suppose the people of Mississippi will be smart enough to see this loophole," Deputy Education Commissioner Wayne Reed said to a pro-integration Mississippiian the other day.

Deputy Commissioner Reed would be interested to know that already Reed Smith, education superintendent for Harrison County in Southern Mississippi, has seen this loophole and started to use it.

Watch for a rash of segregationist-inspired court suits all over Mississippi to throw the schools into litigation. Official purpose will be to force integration. Real purpose will be to block it and still receive federal funds during a long, drawn-out court battle.

All this is why school from the Deep South are smiling. The heart of the South voted against the first Southern President in 100 years, but nobody expects to get pretty much what they want from him anyway.

Mississippi Secretary of Defense McNamara, who has asked me to come here to check on Army-Navy Air Force activities in Southern Mississippi, will be in the state for a long time, so it is not hard to see how he can be used.

City police cases

Negro trio fined

Three Negroes, Sidney Bell and Walter Thomas Benoit of Bay St. Louis and Arthur Thomas of New Orleans, were fined $50 each and sentenced to 30 days in jail by Justice of the Peace Nolan Lusher last week. The trio pleaded guilty to theft of a guitar and money from a car outside of the Crack Bar on Dec. 11 and were arrested by City Police Chief Lusher on Thursday Jan. 26.

Thomas J. Kelly, Jr., 16, of Skidell was picked up by officers Bill Carbonetti and Julius Wehr at 2 a.m. Tuesday for questioning on ownership of the 1960 Corvair he was driving. When he stopped the automobile in front of City Police station, he jumped from the car and fled.

Chief Garriga contacted the FBI and was informed that the car had been stolen from August Lariviere of 728 Perrin Drive, Arabi, La.

Last Tuesday Edward Dear reported the theft of his 1961 Chevrolet Impala from Ideal Trailer Park. Kelley was arrested in the automobile by Mississippi State Highway patrolmen in Seminary.

CD rescue...

By 11:20 p.m. two civil defense boats equipped with searchlights and mobile radio were on the river and a radio truck and base radio hook-up in operation. Moving in opposite directions from their Logtown starting point the southbound crew soon located the boat and its sole occupant.

On rescue Buftin commented "I have never been so pleased to see anybody in my life as I was when those wonderful civil defense boys arrived. Man I was cold," Buftin said.

Hot coffee and blankets revived the victim whose boat motor had cut out about 7 p.m. Buftin explained that his motor's shear pin had broken and emergency repairs failed to hold. Paddling to within 200 yards of the shore, he saw two separate occasions violent squalls had driven the boat onto the sunken barges.

Shipwrecked mariner Buftin was re-united with his wife about 12:55 a.m.

CD personnel taking part were Stieff, Bernie Piazza, James Travira, Elliot Cassanova, Lee Farrell, game warden Pat Toomey, and base radio operator Gerald Price, Jr.

A Negro delegation from Beat 1, led by Frank Mitchell and introduced by supervisor H.G. Dean, requested the removal of the old Rosenwald School from its present location in Galesville onto school board property in Pearlinton. Initially requested by Mitchell to provide recreational facilities for district children, Board President Ed. P. Orto immediately saw the advantage in such an undertaking and submitted that such a facility may permit grades one to four to attend school locally instead of having to bus to Valena G. Jones. Attorney Phillips was once again called upon to investigate costs and legality.

Disposal of school bus bodies came up for review when it was disclosed the board is still having to pay rental on the old garage and repair area because of being unable to sell nine old units. "We are still using the area for storage," said Orto, "and therefore have to pay $50 a month rental." Trustees agreed to give superintendent Lusher the authority to dispose of the units by the best possible means.

Teen Times

As Carnival approaches, the number of kings and queens already selected or to be selected grows accordingly. Queen of Hearts will be first to reign as the winner of this year's contest will be announced and she will be crowned by retiring Prince Donna Thomas tomorrow, Friday, Feb. 5. Any girl in grades one through 12 is eligible and each school will have a winner. Points are achieved by collecting one for each penny donated to the Heart Fund, and the local queen will receive a photograph by Ed Fay-ard, Jr., and be eligible to attend the Heart Fund tea at the governor's mansion in Jackson on Feb. 12.

Bridgette Langbein and Mike
Long will reign over the Krewe of Chicapoula's annual ball on Mardi Gras.

There will also be a brand new pair of monarchs this year when Bay-Waveland Yacht Club juniors hold their first mock carnival bal. So as anyone can plainly see, there's lots of excitement coming up in the next couple of months.

Congratulations to Homemaker of Tomorrow winners.
For Sandra Fillingame it was another honor on top of her selection as the Jaycee's first Junior Miss and Janet Mathers, St. Joseph's leading home ec student, is a relative newcomer, having moved here from California last year.

More queens... Bay High's Campus Queen have been selected, Nan Nelson and Peggy Musser represent the senior class; Piji White and Mimi Jeffrey, juniors; Kay Monasco and Kit Campbell, sophomores, and Sally Porter and Lynda
